If it there were traitors in the camp of reform, as Mr. Spre opposition as a whole. we are none of us quite unselfish; we are none of us absolutely impartial but he who runs may read the lesson of the opposition to the present mismanagement of public affairs. It is not cowardly; it is not selfish; it is not one sided. Harsh as its criticism has been, it has been less harsh than circumstances warranted. But what is the use of this criticism unless men who believe there is rank misgovernment are willing to take office to help reform it. Men of great interests that wait for their best development on the issue of good government in foreign and home affairs, have small right to complain if things go wrong. Penniless adventurers, notorious incompetents, men who are professional and business failures, are just the men to get into office, while the "solid men" of character, intelligence and honestly acquired wealth-decline to accept office, when, by some sacrifice, they might help to make the wrong right. It is unlikely that the present cabine will go out of office until after the next legislature. It is perhaps as well that it should continue in power until then and figures which may not be forth coming until then. But when the present cabinet does go out, and a new cabinet is to be formed, there ought to be no shirking of duty by men who are looked to as leaders and who have at once the brains, the experience and the acknowledged probity to give the community that cordial confidence in their sincerity for reform which the present cabinet has so conspicuously lacked.
